Welcome to R Family

On behalf of the R Family Council and Parent and Family Programs at Rutgers-New Brunswick, I would like to welcome you to R family! All of us on the council are very excited that your student has chosen Rutgers as their home away from home for the next few years. Whether you are a new parent/family member or a “seasoned” parent/family member, you will likely have some questions about how to support your student’s success while they are attending Rutgers. This guide will be helpful to answer some of those questions and provide helpful information about campus departments and services.

We encourage you to be an active parent/family member, as this will contribute to your student’s success. Please take advantage of the many resources and events designed specifically for parents and family members, such as attending monthly parent and family meetings and subscribing to the Parent & Family newsletter. These opportunities have helped me meet other family members and feel supported enough to help my son navigate Rutgers. This community helps to make a large school feel small!

If you ever need guidance and are unsure of how to proceed, please use the Parent and Family Programs office as your first point of contact. They are available to help you support your student success at Rutgers, with the ultimate goal to keep you informed and connected with other parents and families at Rutgers.

In Scarlet Pride,

Lisa Tobin, P’24
R Family Council Member

Ways for You to Get Involved

Attend Monthly Parent and Family Meetings!

All parents and family members are encouraged to attend monthly Parent and Family meetings. The Parent and Family monthly meetings are designed to help families create lasting, meaningful interactions between Rutgers University and the families of Rutgers students. By attending meetings, members can build relationships with other families, share advice, and receive guidance on how to best support their student.

Our meetings also allow parents and family members the opportunity to connect with university departments in an intimate setting and learn about the many benefits these resources provide to students and their families. Past meetings have included presentations from Career Exploration and Success, Study Abroad, and the Rutgers University Police Department. We have also taken behind-the-scenes tours of the Livingston Dining Commons and College Avenue Recreation Center.

First timers are always welcome to the monthly meetings! Refreshments and free parking are provided for every meeting. For dates, times and location of meetings, please visit parents.rutgers.edu.

The First-Year Student Experience

The chart below helps to highlight some of the differences between high school and college so you can have a better understanding of your student's time at Rutgers.

	High School	College
Academics	Students are given a set curriculum to learn from during the traditional time frame of 7:00 a.m.-3:00 p.m.	Students choose which classes they wish to take and what days/times to take them.
Grades	Parents/family members receive a report card with their student's grades each semester.	Student records, including grades, are protected by FERPA. Parents/family members are not privy to their student's grades without their written consent.
Textbooks	Textbooks are provided by the high school and must be returned at the end of the school year.	Students must purchase/rent textbooks for their classes and textbooks can be expensive.
Independence	Parents/family members generally establish "house rules" and set curfews for their students.	Students living in residence halls or off-campus apartments are not assigned curfews; they can come and go based on their schedule.
Attendance	Attendance at each class is mandatory and parents/family members are alerted about attendance and/or tardiness issues.	Attendance policies vary and not every professor will take attendance. Parents/family members will not be notified if students don't attend class.
Class Size	High school courses typically have 30-40 students per class.	University class sizes can range from 30-300 students per class.
Time Management & Prioritizing	Time is structured by school officials and parents. Students can depend on teachers or parent/family members to remind them of their responsibilities and to guide them back to their priorities.	Students manage and take ownership of their time. Students must balance their responsibilities and set priorities for themselves.

The Transfer Student Experience

On average, about 1/3 of college students will transfer to another higher education institution before they complete their college degree. While transfer students are not new to the college experience, they are new to the Rutgers campus so there are a few things to be aware of as you assist your transfer student with their transition to Rutgers University.

Asking for Help is the Key to Success: New transfer students hold a major advantage in that they have a strong understanding of how the college setting works. However, their previous knowledge should not deter them from seeking assistance when needed. There are a variety of services at Rutgers that many students coming from other institutions did not previously have access to, including the Learning Center, Writing and Science labs, Dean of Students, and academic advisors. Encourage your student to utilize the appropriate resources as needed.

Maintain a Good Balance: Many transfer students also work full- or part-time jobs in addition to attending classes. These students should be mindful when creating their academic schedule to ensure that they can dedicate adequate time to work and school.

“Transfer Shock” is real. As a transfer student attending a new school, some students may experience a temporary decline in the GPA during their first or second semester at Rutgers. Remember to be patient with yourself as you adjust to the academic expectations at Rutgers and use the resources outlined in this guide.

A Good Amount of Learning Will Happen Outside the Classroom: Students coming from smaller community colleges and universities may have had limited opportunities to get involved with organizations and connect with other students. Rutgers has over 700 student organizations that allow students to explore academic, social, religious and cultural interests. Student organization involvement is not only a great way to make new friends, but this will also provide students with great leadership experience that can strengthen their resume.

Regardless of Where a Student Started, Rutgers is Their New Home: Transfer students have an opportunity to make lifelong connections with other students and learn from world class faculty members during their time at Rutgers. First-year and transfer students face many similar challenges in making new friends, finding their way around campus, and choosing the right major. Remind your student that even if they did not start their college journey at Rutgers, they have a new identity as a proud Scarlet Knight, now and forevermore!

Involvement

Rutgers University students excel throughout their college career because of their on-campus involvement. Here are some statistics of how campus involvement has improved student life:

- Involvement on campus correlates with higher levels of student retention and greater progress to the four-year degree.
- Students who are involved in their first year benefit from mentor-mentee relationships with upperclass students they meet in organizations.
- Students involved on campus have higher GPAs and rate themselves as happier than students who are not involved.
- Involvement in organizations can help students choose a major and shift from undeclared to declared status.
- Students who get involved in co-curricular activities in their first year consume less alcohol than uninvolved students. They also report fewer conflicts with their parents.

Skills Employers Value

As a result of students' on-campus involvement, they are able to gain skills and experiences that make them more marketable in the workforce. Here are the top five skills that employers value in successful candidates:

1. Ability to communicate verbally with people inside and outside the organization
2. Ability to work in a team structure
3. Ability to make decisions and solve problems
4. Ability to plan, organize and prioritize work
5. Ability to obtain and process information

Monthly Tips

August: Academic schedules will be released. This is a great time for students to review their schedule and make an appointment with an academic advisor in their school/college if they need to adjust their schedule. Housing assignments will have been distributed in late July. Students planning to live off campus should consult Off-Campus Living and Community Partnerships for tips on finding an off-campus residence.

September: Students are able to make changes to their schedule during the first week of school. They can contact their academic advisors for assistance. The Involvement Fair takes place and features over 700 student organizations that students can learn more about and join.

October: It's midterm time – check in with your student about study habits and resources. Don't forget to complete the FAFSA to receive financial aid for the next academic year. Additionally, students should consult an academic advisor to stay on track for course registration for the following semester. If they haven't yet identified academic support services like tutoring, office hours, and study groups for their courses, now is the time to get connected!

November: Homesickness and illnesses can start to set in for many students. Remind them about the Counseling and Student Health Centers on campus and maybe even send them a care package. Students should also meet with academic advisors to help with course selection for the Spring semester.

December: It's time for finals! Make sure your student identifies some study places and tips. As your student prepares to come home for Winter Break, revisit your communication plan to ensure that everyone's expectations still align.

January: It is a great time for your student to prepare for the spring semester. Check in with them to ensure they have everything they need for classes and the start of a new semester. The Housing Lottery process for on-campus residences will open this month.

February: This is the best time for your student to beat the winter blues and explore the recreation centers.

March: It's time for a little break—Spring Break that is! Students should also plan to visit their academic advisor to stay on track with course registration for the upcoming semester.

April: Finals will soon be underway, so students should take time to visit the Learning Center for tips on how to ace their final exams.

May: Find some time to celebrate the end of the academic year and all the successes that came with it!

Helpful Tips

The transition to college life can be a fun, exploratory process where students will grow and mature into responsible adults who are ready to take on the “real world.” During the next few years, your student will inevitably encounter some struggles on the road to graduation. Here are some helpful tips on how to support your new Rutgers student:

- Anticipate and Support Change: Your student will be exposed to new social, academic, and cultural opportunities during their time in college. Most of these opportunities will change your student and aid them in becoming a holistic, well-rounded adult. Ask questions and have ongoing conversations to stay in the know about how your student is developing and changing during their time in college.
- Have a Conversation about Financial Responsibilities: Your student will be introduced to the concept of financial literacy in a variety of ways during their first year. Continue the conversation at home and take some time to discuss what expenses your students will be responsible for (including meal plans, books, tuition and loans) and educate them about budgets, credit cards, and managing their finances.
- Educate Yourself: You can be a vested partner in your student’s success by being knowledgeable about campus resources so you can refer your student as needed. If you notice that your student needs extra assistance, encourage them to utilize the many support services available at the university that are listed in the back of the book.
- Empower Your Student: When your student encounters an issue, help them develop their decision-making skills by taking a step back and allowing them to generate solutions. When students develop and own their decisions and find solutions using campus resources, they will grow and mature into independent adults.

Developing a Communication Plan

Parents and family members can often underestimate how the communication between them and their student will change as their student begins to transition to the college environment. We recommend taking a proactive approach by developing a communication plan, focusing on personal communication, academics, and student life. A good suggestion is to have at least 2-3 conversations throughout the year with realistic expectations, understanding that your plan should be revisited and revised based on ever-changing schedules and needs. Try to determine a personal communication plan that works best for both parties. This will go a long way in avoiding unexpected concerns or misunderstandings.

Academic: The academic arena will likely present a greater challenge for your student than high school or community college. There will be a lot to discuss as your student adjusts to the academic rigor at Rutgers. Here are some aspects to consider in regard to academics:

- Do both parties expect grades to be shared every semester?
- Has your student chosen a major that aligns with their skills and strengths?
- What information would you want shared about academic performance? (Be prepared that parent/teacher conferences will not be a reality once your student is in college).

Student Life & Experience: As your student gets acclimated to Rutgers, they will spend time attending co-curricular events and going to student organization meetings, attending programs, etc. Take some time to talk to your student about how they will communicate with you about their student experience at Rutgers.

- How soon in advance should your student inform you about important deadlines and bills that you may share responsibility for?
- Do either parties have expectations about internships, jobs or conducting research?
- What are involvement opportunities that may help your student prepare for future career opportunities?

Tips:

- Ask your student to share their schedule so you know when they are in classes.
- Consider starting a family "group chat" where your students can share pictures, videos and other things about their college experience.

Conversation Starters

Conversation Starters

Now that you have started to think about how you will communicate with your student once they enter Rutgers, here are some conversation starters that will help pave the way for some thoughtful dialogue regarding things they are experiencing and learning in their new college environment.

Beginning of the Semester:

- When you think about starting college, what makes you most nervous?
- How are you making connections with your roommates?
- What classes seem most interesting to you?
- What do you hope to get involved with this semester?

Middle of the semester:

- How do you feel about the amount of time we've spent communicating and visiting so far?
- Tell me about some of your successes so far.
- Tell me about a fun event you attended on campus.
- What are additional ways I can provide support to you?
- How are you adjusting to college life?
- How are you managing your finances?
- Have you considered studying abroad? What programs or countries interest you?
- Have you thought about starting a part-time job on campus? What jobs interest you?
- How is studying different now that you are at Rutgers from high school/ previous college?
- When it was time to take a test, who did you study with?
- When do you register for classes next semester? Have you made an appointment with your academic advisor?
- What has been your biggest challenge so far?
- What organizations have you joined? What interested you most about these groups?
- How have you balanced classes and campus involvement?

End of the semester:

- What are you most proud of this semester?
- What was the highlight of your semester?
- How did you stay organized this semester? Is there something you'd like to do differently next semester?
- What projects, jobs or involvement opportunities have you done lately that you might be able to add to your resume?
- Did you cross any items off of your RUcket List? (RUcket List = Bucket List that starts with an "R" for Rutgers)

New semester:

- Do you have any new stressors that are different from the previous semester? How are you managing stress?

Important Conversations: Mental Health, Alcohol & Other Drug Use

Becoming a college student is a significant transition for young adults and for their parents and family members as well. Whether living on or off campus, students can struggle with many issues – fitting in, making friends, finding social outlets, or missing family and friends back home. Parents and family members can play a role in helping students adjust while also checking in on emotional wellness and what’s happening in your student’s social scene.

Emotional Wellness

Many students struggle with the college transition. Here are some tips for supporting your student in maintaining emotional wellness or if they are having difficulties with the transition:

- Let them know you are always there if they need to talk. Tell them it’s okay if they do not want to talk to you and know what resources are available at Rutgers and share that information.
- Normalize help-seeking behaviors. Everyone struggles at some point. If they had a physical ailment, they would see a health care provider; it’s the same with emotional health. If your student is having mental health concerns, they should seek help. They can contact Counseling, Alcohol and Other Drug Assistance Program & Psychiatric Services (CAPS).
- Ask questions! Are they making friends? With whom do they eat lunch and/or dinner? Do they like their classes? Their instructors? Are any classes difficult? Which ones? Why? What are they doing socially? Have they joined any student organizations? Gone to any parties? This might help you identify where they are struggling.

You may notice changes in their behavior such as:

- Withdrawal from family and friends
- Feeling discouraged, and hopeless about the future
- Missing work or other appointments
- Losing interest in activities or people
- Sleeping too much or difficulty sleeping

If so, let your student know that you have noticed these changes and are concerned. Suggest they make an appointment with Counseling, Alcohol and Other Drug Assistance Program & Psychiatric Services (CAPS) at 848-932-7884 or visit health.rutgers.edu/CAPS for an overview of services. Keep talking and letting them know that they are not alone.

Five Tips to Talk to Your Student about Alcohol & Other Drugs

Preparing to attend college is a special time that marks the beginning of a new milestone for your student's independence and continued academic success. As you help your student plan and organize for college, take an opportunity to remind your student of their responsibility to make responsible decisions regarding alcohol and drug use.

1. Have an open and honest dialogue with your student to communicate your expectations of their behavior related to alcohol and/or drugs. Remind your student of their responsibility as a Rutgers University student on and off campus.
2. Encourage your student to make responsible and informed choices to decrease the risk of negative consequences.
3. Remind your student that confidential resources are available on campus (i.e. Do Something, dosomething.rutgers.edu) students that may want to help or share a concern. Confidential resources are also available for students that would like to seek support regarding alcohol and drug use (i.e. CAPS-Counseling, Alcohol and Other Drug Assistance Program & Psychiatric Services).
4. Discuss strategies with your student to help them manage challenging situations that they may be confronted with during their college experience.
5. Encourage your student to utilize the campus security escort service for safe transportation as needed to vehicles, campus residences, or the University mass transit system. Students may request police escort services at no cost by dialing the RUPD non-emergency number at 732-932-7211.

Visiting Campus

Visiting Campus

Guest parking permits are $5 per day and can be purchased by visiting parktran.rutgers.edu. If you are a first-time user, you will have to create an account before purchasing your permit. All parking permits are issued electronically. There is not a need to print out or receive a tag to hang in your vehicle.

Campus Bus System

When you are on campus, you are welcome to use our Rutgers bus system to get around and visit other campuses. Rutgers buses are free and open to all guests. Buses run seven days a week; service times vary by day. You can find the bus schedule and route information on the Rutgers app under Bus.

We'll fling the Scarlet Banner out,
And Rutgers men will fight, fight, fight, fight, fight;
The bells of Queens each victory shout
The bells of Queens must ring tonight.

FAQs for Parents and Families

You may have some questions about what your student will experience during their time at Rutgers University–New Brunswick. You can find answers to some frequently asked questions below.

What items are provided in a standard residence hall room?

Each student living on campus will be provided a bed, closet, desk and chair, dresser, extra-long twin mattress, and a mirror. Each room includes a microfridge, high speed internet access, cable television service and blinds. A full list of residence hall furnishings and items to pack can be found online at ruoncampus.rutgers.edu.

Does my student need to move their belongings out of their residence hall during breaks?

Students do not have to remove all of their belongings from their residence halls when the university is closed for Thanksgiving, Winter and Spring breaks. When the residence halls are closed, students will not have access to their rooms so they should pack all necessary items. Students must fully remove all belongings when the residence halls close in May.

What options are available to my student if they choose to live off-campus?

Students who are living off campus can contact Off-Campus Living and Community Partnerships for guidance on finding a residence, signing a lease, and navigating landlord dealings. Students can explore their off-campus options at ruoffcampus.rutgers.edu.

What services are available for students who are commuting (do not live on campus)?

Rutgers University provides a number of amenities for students who travel to campus for classes. Commuter students can study and relax in the commuter lounges in between classes and take advantage of free lockers, microwaves, computers with internet access, a TV, and comfortable seating. For more information about commuter student involvement, amenities, and study spaces, please visit involvement.rutgers.edu/commuter-involvement.

My student is from out of state. What information can help them adjust to New Jersey?

Out-of-state students who are attending Rutgers are encouraged to join the Out-Of-State Student Organization to meet and connect with other students. Information about this student organization can be found by visiting getinvolved.rutgers.edu. This website also lists hundreds of other student organizations that students can explore. The College Avenue campus is conveniently located near the New Jersey Transit train station, which connects to many trains, buses and Newark airport. Students should also come prepared with warm clothes for those snowy winter days!

FAQs for Parents and Families

What meal options are available if my student has a special diet or food allergy?

All students living in residence halls are required to have a meal plan, which can be used at any of the four dining halls and at select retail operations. Rutgers Dining Services has a system in place to ensure that students with dietary restrictions have appropriate, safe, and delicious food options. Dining Services nutritionists work with students on an individual basis to accommodate special dietary needs. Students with special diets or food allergies can complete a Medical and Dietary Consideration Form. This form can be accessed at food.rutgers.edu.

Why didn't I receive a report card at the end of the semester?

FERPA, the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, ensures that student's educational records remain private and cannot be shared with anyone without written consent. Initially, it might seem stressful or frustrating that you cannot readily access this information, but hopefully this will allow for an open and honest conversation with your student about what information you expect to receive and what information your student is comfortable sharing with you. Students can fill out a FERPA consent form at scarlethub.rutgers.edu/registrar/ferpa-information, which allows, but does not compel, the university to communicate with you about your student's records.

Is my student required to have a computer/laptop and printer?

While computers and laptops are recommended, students are not required to purchase these items for class. There are over 15 computer labs across the five New Brunswick/ Piscataway campuses, providing nearly 1,000 workstations and over 40 printers. A list of computer labs and locations can be accessed at oit-nb.rutgers.edu/computing-labs.

What should my student do if they get sick while on campus?

If a student is not feeling well and needs to visit a health care provider, they can make an appointment at an on-campus student health center. Appointments are usually available within 24 hours by calling 848-932-7402 or health.rutgers.edu. All full-time undergraduate students taking 12 or more credit hours are required to have comprehensive health insurance each semester. The premium is automatically added to a student's term bill each semester and must be waived at the beginning of each semester if a student has comparable coverage. For more information visit riskmanagement.rutgers.edu/student-health-insurance.

FAQs for Parents and Families

What services are available for students with disabilities?

There are many accommodations that can be made through the Office of Disability Services for students approved by the appropriate review committee. This may include, but is not limited to, the following: extra time for exams, recorders, note takers, and text in alternate format. Students needing accommodations must provide documentation as early as possible and can start this process by calling 848-445-6800 or visiting ods.rutgers.edu.

I am concerned about my student's mental health. What resources can I give my student regarding on-campus services?

Rutgers University offers many resources for students who might need assistance with emotional wellness. Counseling, Alcohol and Drug Assistance and Psychiatric Services (CAPS) has a variety of services for students, from individual counseling to group therapy to assisting students who are utilizing medication for a mental health issue.

For a full overview of services, go to health.rutgers.edu. Other resources include the Dean of Students Office, Faith Communities, the Learning Centers, and the Cultural Collaborative Centers. Touch base with your student. Ask them not just how their classes are going, but if they find any classes difficult. Have they made any new friends or joined any student organizations? If you sense they are struggling, let them know it is normal and that they can find assistance on campus.

I'm concerned about my student's safety while at the university. What advice can I give my student regarding staying safe on campus?

Rutgers University Police Department (RUPD) operates 24 hours a day, 365 days a year, and officers continually patrol the campus. Students can take precautions by remaining aware of their surroundings at all times, safeguarding their valuable items, and traveling in groups. Additionally, students can request a Public Safety walking escort to their vehicle, campus residence, or the university buses by calling the non-emergency RUPD phone number 732-932-7211.

How can I ensure that my student stays out of trouble while at college?

The best you can do for your student is to ensure that they have read the Student Code of Conduct. The code of conduct outlines the behaviors that all Rutgers students are expected to abide by. The code of conduct is located at studentconduct.rutgers.edu.

Will my student have access to a tutor if they need help with their classes?

Rutgers University students have access to several support services for academic success. The Rutgers Learning Centers, with a location on each of the five New Brunswick campuses, engage students in group and one-on-one tutoring. Students can join a study group, attend an academic success workshop, or sign up for drop-in tutoring if they are having trouble in a certain course, or wish to strengthen their skills in an academic area. For more information visit rlc.rutgers.edu.

Can residential students receive mail on campus?

Yes, all students can receive mail on campus. Students who live in Rutgers University residence halls and apartments need to “opt in” to activate a mailbox through the my.rutgers.edu portal. Off-campus students who want to receive mail on campus must email mailquestions@ipo.rutgers.edu in order to “opt in”. The mailing address they should use is determined by the campus they live on or is provided to them. For more information on mailboxes and sending and receiving campus mail, visit the Mail Services website at mds.rutgers.edu.

TIPS FOR PARENTS AND FAMILIES OF COLLEGE STUDENTS

Going to college can be both exciting and challenging for students and their families. For some, it is a smooth transition and for others it can be overwhelming. Here are some ways to help make the transition as easy as possible.

SUPPORT YOUR STUDENT'S AUTONOMY.

Give your student some room to get settled into their new life. College students often have a difficult task of balancing autonomy and self-reliance. It can be a fine line between helping too much and helping too little. The degree to which you decrease support depends on your student. The goal is to continue to be supportive without doing everything for them.

HAVE REALISTIC EXPECTATIONS.

49% of students report that their family's expectations are too high. This often leads to feelings of anxiety, guilt, shame, and sadness. Failure (and learning how to deal with it) is integral to their success. Talk to your student about how you love them and want the best for them, but that you are there for them regardless.

ALLOW YOUR STUDENT TO RELAX.

College is about development; academically and socially. In addition to your student focusing on their schoolwork, it is important for them to relax with friends. A balanced life that includes work, play, and rest is essential to a healthy life (for everyone!). Encourage your student to make time for friends and activities they enjoy.

FORGET THE STIGMA AND DISCUSS MENTAL HEALTH.

Approximately 50% of people will experience a mental health challenge in their lifetime. Your student may not feel comfortable starting the conversation, so be the one to start it. Give your student mental health resources (see list below) and show them that you are supportive of them seeking services. Family acceptance often plays a big role in a child's ability to manage stressors.

STAY IN TOUCH.

College is a transitional time and homesickness is very common, especially for first-year and transfer students. Create a realistic plan to stay in touch on a regular basis whether it's through writing, emails, texting, skyping or talking over the phone. You can also help make the transition easier by attending Parents' Weekend and helping them get connected to clubs and services on campus.

Provided by staff at Counseling, Alcohol and Other Drug Assistance Program & Psychiatric Services (CAPS).

If you think your student could benefit from services at CAPS, have them contact us at 848-932-7884.
